

David Stutzenberger is Professor of Music and Director of Choral Activities at the University of Tennessee, where he conducts the Chamber Singers and the Men's Chorale, teaches graduate courses in choral conducting and literature, and is Vocal Area Coordinator of Conducting. He also serves as Director of Music at the First Christian Church in Knoxville. Prior to joining the UT faculty, he was a member of the music faculty at Okaloosa-Walton Junior College and later served as Director of Choral Activities at Shenandoah University and Conservatory of Music. Stutzenberger received the Bachelor of Music Education degree from George Peabody College, the Master of Science in Music Education degree from the University of Illinois, and the Doctor of Musical Arts degree from the University of Maryland.

From 2001-2003 Dr. Stutzenberger served as President of the American Choral Directors Association and on the Board of the International Federation for Choral Music. Currently he serves as Chair of the ACDA Past-Presidents Council and is Executive Secretary/Treasurer of the East Tennessee Vocal Association. Choirs he has conducted have performed at State and Division Conventions of both the American Choral Directors Association and the Music Educators National Conference, at Carnegie Hall, for national radio and television, at the National Gallery of Art, at the John F. Kennedy Center, and on concert tours of Europe, Russia, and England. In addition to his teaching responsibilities, he appears frequently as a guest conductor of all-state, honor, and community choruses; as a choral adjudicator; and as a choral clinician. Besides ACDA, professional affiliations include IFCM, MENC, Tennessee Music Education Association, East Tennessee Vocal Association, and the American Choral Foundation. He is also a member of Pi Kappa Lambda, Phi Mu Alpha, and has been listed in Outstanding Educators of America.
